Design Contest Input Needed

Posted by admin - 2004/05/03 15:27

We wish to host a map design contest later this month, and I would like your feedback on how best to do it. I want to make it restricted somehow, so someone with a huge amount of sets will have an advantage. Here are some ideas to kick around:

1) Give a bried description of an encounter and let the builders come up with the set for it. That should keep it small and creative.

2) Give a list of what exact sets can be used, and then see who can come up with the coolest design.

3) Give a specific challenge and see who can to the best job -- something like a large bridge within a cavern complex or a ruined moathouse.

Your feedback would be appreciated.

==========

Design Contest Input Needed

Posted by Thor - 2004/05/03 15:39

Two Classes?

Limited: Small number of DF sets. (No homemade pieces)

Unlimited: Anything goes.

I'm interested in your #1 idea. DF used to best handle an encounter. That is how we use this stuff in games.

Will the Computer design thingy be ready by then? Is that what we will be using?

==========

Design Contest Input Needed

Posted by MyLordVoid - 2004/05/24 17:26

I Like the Idea of Multiple Classes "Advanced" and "Beginner" or what Ever, and are we Talking about "Open" Designs Using Like an Unlimited Number of "Fictional" Sets (A la Dungeon Mapper on the Site), or are we Talking about Showing say Digital Photos of Actual Sets... Cause that Could Make a Difference right there in Catagories Best "Ideal" Lay-out Versus Best "Actual" Layout etc... I Like Your Idea Number 2 myself, in terms of Variety... And I Also Think it might be Interesting to have a Specific Catagory for for say Individual "Modified" DF Pieces, Like Alternate Paint Schemes, and Home made "Nernies"... (Using DF of Course)...

==========

Design Contest Input Needed
Posted by Alkatchoff - 2004/05/31 22:19

_____

I like the first idea, concerning the re-creation of an encounter. Just seems liek it makes better contest material then the others.

Alkatchoff

==========

Design Contest Input Needed
Posted by brvheart - 2004/06/02 06:43

_____

Anything on this as the month has now passed?

==========

Design Contest Input Needed
Posted by MyLordVoid - 2004/06/06 19:08

_____

I am Curious as Well?

==========