

Korgoth of Barbaria

Posted by Bezultek - 2006/06/11 22:18

---

Did anyone happen to catch Korgoth of Barbaria on Adult Swim last week?

I recorded it, and just watched it tonight. It was brilliant! Excellent writing and great animation.

As the name implies, Korgoth is a barbarian, and the show is set in a post apocalyptic future. In the first episode, Korgoth must retrieve a gold statuette from an abandoned wizard's castle.

The writing is definitely adult (as one would expect from Adult Swim), and very funny (as one would expect from the guy who brought us Spongebob Squarepants). A fair amount of potty humour, which I don't usually go in for, doesn't detract from the overall humour. The animation is gritty to say the least. Very gory. Korgoth tends to improvise weapons, his favorite being the hacked off limb of the previous opponent.

If you didn't catch it, definitely take a look for it. It's the funniest thing on television since "The Family Guy."

And if you have seen it, and did like it, apparently Adult Swim wants feedback. You can write in at:

<http://www.adultswim.com/gen/contact/index.html>

Cheers,
Zul

=====