I dont know if someone posted this before...
here is an alternative to dwarven forge, especially for european costumers.

Yeah, I agree - NOT appreciated!

Poster is probably the person who makes the stuff looking for some free publicity!

Congratulations, Stefan, you are officially a success. When people start ripping off your product and your name, you have definitely arrived.

And I am so happy that I get to say it first... LAWSUIT!!!

Be that as it may, it is extremely poor form to come onto a company's website and post links to a competing product.

It's like walking into a restaurant and announcing that another restaurant down the street has a similar menu and cheaper prices. Or going to a Babylon 5 convention and talking about how much better Star Trek is. Or going to a rock concert and shouting about how much better some other band is. Or going to someone's home and telling everyone how much more fun it is at someone else's house.

This was rude and uncalled for. I hope that DF deletes this thread, revokes your account, and sues the cr@p out of the jerks using their name to advertise a rip-off product on German e-Bay.

its uk ebay not german calm down. maybe we can turn this into a discussion why df is so expensive and the rip off isnt ?

or delete the thread and/or my acc

Well, DF is more expensive than the other stuff for the same reason a BMW costs more than a Yugo.

Anyone looking at the pictures can immediately see why DF costs more. These don't even look as good as Mystic Blocks.

It would be a different story if you hadn't registered for the sole reason of getting free advertising.

I do buy knock-off products from time to time, to supplement my DF collection. I won't be buying these, however.

And, unless the 1940's went a different way, the web site is in German.

Wow ... so NOT cool !!

Intentional or not, Ebay Seller or not, this is just rude and so out of line from any angle.

Regardless of DF prices, you don't step into their "house" and shill other substandard products that don't even compare.

Those of us regular, long-time fans and members of this forum get defensive of Dwarven Forge and the great people that make up the company. I'm sure they can speak for themselves but they shouldn't have to address nonsense like this (other than to simply delete the thread).

Too bad your first posts show such poor form ... we're usually a friendly and tolerant bunch here. But, trying to pull business away from a company that we have supported and have a vested interest in their success is just asking for a backlash.

All right, let's keep this friendly. There have been discussions about alternative and complimentary products in the past (Mystic Blocks, Hirst Arts, etc.), and they've been tolerated.

Also, please be careful to distinguish criticism of the product/ebayer from that of the poster. Ole has stated that he's not the creator of the product, and we should take him at his word unless someone has evidence to the contrary.

I'm not impressed at all with those rip offs. WOTC's cardboard tiles look better than that stuff, in my opinion.

Mein eBay....yea definitely German Yea most definitely (attempt at "RainMan" imitation.)

Plus everything else is German on there....UK site has the prices in British pounds not Euro's as well.
