Monte Cook's Ptolus themed set?

Posted by tort518 - 2009/07/01 14:08

I was wondering if there's be any chance of a Ptolus set. It would definitely work with all the other sets for fantasy and even sci-fi. I think it would sell well because of how eclectic the setups could be, and it would have the added bonus of grabbing the attention of us Ptolus fans. (and I'm sure Monte would use it on his Dungeonaday site)

Things that could be included:

Mirrored walls (for the mirror maze if you got more than one set)
Blue steel doors
glass & bronze doors
marble facade pieces (could be used for Oldtown buildings or just marble inside a dungeon)
archways (as suggested by others)
Pits of Insanity (let Monte describe those, although I'm sure they could look all sorts of bizarre)

Plenty of other things could easily go into something like this that work with all the sets.

I'd buy three sets at least, even if cash strapped. The versatility and variety in it alone would make it useful.

Thoughts?

==========

Monte Cook's Ptolus themed set?

Posted by Harneloot - 2009/08/18 14:44

Monte does love and use DF and I blieve is even an occasional poster here on the boards. I do love Ptolus, and have used Cavern, MBS, DoE and regular sets to portray numerous different location in and under Ptolus. Try a Sci-fi door as a blue steel door - works pretty well! In fact, I have mixed in quite a few of the sci-fi peices when doing set-ups that involve extensive chaoitec stuff (like the Surgeon in the Shadows).

Cheers!

==========