Niggling Little Things

_____

On the commercial website Products page: Y'all should really have a picture of a piece that is available for individual sale on the link to the Individual Pieces section.

In general: green-on-black and blue-on-black are not high-contrast color combinations. They make UserIDs and some of the buttons hard to read.

And how do we delete a post? All I can manage is to excise the text, but I still have a blank post. (As above.)

_____

1. If you want to replace an image in a post (because you posted the wrong image, or you have a better/updated image) you are out of luck. The Edit function doesn't allow you to specify an image file for upload, and if you try to put it in using code then you might just lose the original image.

2. The navigation "bar" for the forums is way too small.

The Code of Conduct section is completely empty. There used to be two "threads" -- one with the actual code, and one about contacting the moderator. Are they coming back?

I've been going back and reading some old threads, and I notice that some multi-page threads have been split up.

In your copious spare time (webmaster), can you search for threads with exactly the same title, and reunite them? Is that even possible?

Thanks! Working on that.
