

Adventures in the Wilderlands

Here's some photos of Blairgb's game that I play in.

This encounter was a funny one. Two characters in our party are Tharbrian, and they were involved in the murder of a good Tharbrian priest of Bridget in a session I missed. Their enemies sent female assassins to the Painted Palace of Resissa in the city of Strantath to deal with them(us).

Here we have our party in the 1st photo...

Brus Briarburndt is the Tharbrian up on the counter.

Golth the Northman is my Avalonian ice wizard, who is in blue robes, of course.
Zarmodious Blacktongue the swamp wizard of the Mermist Swamp is next to Golth.

At the other table we have(from the top, counterclockwise)...

Falconfrost the Half Elf, legendary hero of the Underwing Jungle.
Alundelm the Woodstalker, elven druid.
And Cyatris, the dwarven druid apprentice.

Assassins came in, disguised as whores, and with no words but "It's time to cut the meat," they attacked.
Brus was slain, his throat cut out by one of the assassins short sword.

Later in the session we were ambushed by a huge cyclops, whose son was slain by the our characters in a previous session. Here's some pics...

Later still the last of the family of cyclops' and it's pet mountain tiger caught up with us.

You can see Deuce, the thuggish looking rogue with the breastplate and club. We took him on to fill Brus' role.

Charles "Scab" Mclure showed up too, he's the bearded guy with the mace raised high.

The blue beast is Alundelm's rhino companion Gragak.

During the fight with the huge cyclops the other Tharbrian, Korgan, son of Keegan, who was involved in the murder of Marash the goodly priest, was slain. We returned to the Gatecastle of the Black Sun so Scab Mclure could attempt to open a portal to the Netherworld and we could reclaim Korgan from beyond the grave. All went according to plan and we found him in the grips of toadmen at the foot of a huge altar to Tsathoggus across the river Styx.

After slaying the toadmen and dire toads we made our way across the river Styx with the help of our new Folding Boat. As we grabbed Korgan a big toad demon appeared at the portal, and blasted us with green fireballs. We killed it and got the hell outta there.

Adventures in the Wilderlands

Here's an overview of the last session we ran. Our characters returned to Strantath, where Brus was slain, and procured a bunch of supplies, including weapons and poison. We were summoned to the hall of The Horned God, Grontar the Frutang, a benevolent bull headed god who oversees much of the welfare of the poor and abused of Strantath. He thought we had designs to kill him. We assured him we did not and he asked if Zarmodius wished to atone for his actions. The swamp man agreed, so we promised to protect the Frutang from assassins that Viridians had hired to slay him. The same Viridians who had duped our friends into killing Marsh, the goodly priest.

Blair set up an awesome long range battle at the river gate to the slums, where we intercepted the assassins. We rubbed a few fishermen the wrong way and they ratted us out to local Brigit supporters, and lo and behold four Shieldmaidens tried to take a few of us out too. Intense...

Two wizards hiding behind a hut and buffing. The druids softened the earth near the water (the white outline), called lightning and flaming spheres.

Another overview as the Trolls surged forward. Our party today was quite "soft". Two wizards, two druids and a rogue. Good thing the elven druid's rhino is such a solid tank.

Here's Zarmodius using his Wand Of Yezud, and binding the ogres in webs. That's his player there, Wes, our resident painting expert.

Here's my wizard dealing with the Shieldmaidens. He had all his defense spells going (mirror image, shield, mage armor) so the Brigitites couldn't hit him, thank god.

We're super stoked because we finally got a new room to play in. We're all chipping in on rent for a space. You can see all the shelves, and we still need more. I'll try to post some pics of the space too...

Thanks a lot. It's so much more awesome now that all our toys are accessible. All of us are right into it.

We're just renting a bedroom in a friend's house. He plays in the group. We looked into office/jam spaces, but this was easiest for everybody, and relatively cheap($40/month each).
