Some cavernous river chasm variants....

I have been mixing and matching variations on the same essential setup -- some with greater variety, some with less. I particularly like the one with three levels, especially with the sunlight pouring through the cave entrance, suggesting that you really are pretty much out in the open air by that point. And I love the goblins hiding in the ledges over the lake.

Really, really fun stuff -- I'm digging finally having a chance to mix the chasm pieces with the river and lake elements. I still think the chasm set may be the pinnacle of the DF experience, it just really adds panache to any cavern layout.

Enjoy!

Wow - all those sets REALLY look amazing together!

Any chance you could post a Tilesystem map of the levels of that set-up?

Thanks! Sorry, I don't use Tilesystem. I try to include overhead "map" shots, though, which clarify which pieces I used -- the stuff under the stacked levels is just a generic mess of whatever I had on hand that would be stable. It's not playable.
