DWARVEN FORGE "Purchase Credits"

Posted by dndgamer - 2010/06/08 23:02

I've been a collector for a long time and have only recently been able to afford several large purchases in order to get the "Special" piece that was offered. Many times I had wished I could buy the 3-sets in order to get the "Special" piece being offered but was not able to. However, that did not stop me from placing my order for the one set! My ONLY regret now is not being able to find those "Special" pieces on eBay at a reasonable price or AT ALL, for that matter.

So, I've been thinking of a way DF can reward collectors that consistently buy from DF -- if but only one set at a time.

How about "Purchase Credits"? We see this form of goodwill from many retail sources: buy 10 get 1 free (just an example).

Perhaps there can be a way where certain number of purchases will permit that collector to actually receive a "Special" piece even if they're not able to order more than one set.

This, of course, is just an idea and I would enjoy hearing your take on this.

==========

Re:DWARVEN FORGE "Purchase Credits"

Posted by admin - 2010/06/15 10:40

I will look into the capabilities of our shopping cart system. We might be able to award points with it...and maybe give out some kind of thank you based on points earned.

Thanks for the idea!

==========