Updates only on Facebook now?
Posted by Harneloot - 2011/05/12 06:37

_____

Saw some random update on Facebook last night about new sets in development and pictures of the Elven set? yet there is nothing posted here about it. Why?

Will updates only be coming through Facebook now? I honestly check this site much more than I am on FB and would be disappointed if that were the case.

Such social websites are very criticized here in my country.
I haven't a facebook profile and don't want my personal infos given to everybody so plz update the official website and not a facebook page or tweeter or something else.

I'd agree with the above. Facebook is okay, but I may or may not see a post there. If I don't check for a while then i'd probably miss it. I do check this forum, especially the "Recent discussions" page (have it bookmarked actually) several times a week. That would be my preference about where DF should post news and tidbits. You can certainly do both, but please don't neglect the forums!

I do not want a FaceBook account, and will not get one just to keep up with DF updates.

Also, my employers strongly discourage membership on social websites such as FaceBook.

Please continue to use your website and the forums for major announcements.

I think using facebook is a great marketing tool. On the other hand, If updates and news will only be posted on facebook I will be sadly disappointed as I doubt I'll ever use facebook.

Facebook is a new tool that we want to use to keep people aware of Dwarven Forge. It is good for all of us to keep Dwarven Forge healthy and thriving.

We have never posted pics of a new set on Facebook. We do plan on posting a pic of a new set once we get something to show, but it will have a link to a post on this Forum that shows lots of good pics.

We have not posted much news on this Forum lately because there really has not been much to show. We have several projects in the works, but we don't have any photos to share just yet.

Once we do, we will post the pics here (and put a link and photo on Facebook, too).

This summer should see lots of good pics, and we should have some cool stuff at Gen Con Indy.

Thanks for your patience!

I think facebook has its place but any news you need to put on your main website as well as not everyone uses facebook.
For example you recently added some new individual pieces to the website and I only knew about this due to Facebook, if I wasn't on it I would of had to check your products page.

Good point! I should have posted that here, too.

Thanks.
