Gaming Closet Rearranged
Posted by MrMorden - 2004/11/22 22:07

I'm in the process of rearranging my gaming closet...any opinions?

==========

Gaming Closet Rearranged
Posted by L - 2004/11/22 22:36

Oh, I dream of having so much space. . . ;) Very jealous.

I am not sure how often you clean your space there, but if you get...distracted....like me. ahem you may want to move your DF stuff to a higher place on the shelf.

Anything I leave near the floor, after awhile it ends up with dustbunnies and such all over it -- narsty place, gollum gollum.

But if you're a better cleaner than I am, you're probably good to go.

L

==========

Gaming Closet Rearranged
Posted by Darkfather - 2004/11/22 23:07

Now that is a great idea.

Let me guess, you don't have cats or young kids right? Or is it that your gaming room is 'sealed off' from such DF destroying creatures?

I wish I could do that in my gaming room, but alas, with 4 cats I have to pack everything up after each session.....

==========

Gaming Closet Rearranged
Posted by MrMorden - 2004/11/23 09:18

Thanks for the compliments guys.

Actually DF, I do have two cats. But that closet has a sliding door to keep them at bay. :)

I pretty much have to keep my plastic D&D minis out of reach, one of my cats loves to "borrow" them...

I'm actually re-doing the whole game room, so when it's complete I'll take pics of the whole thing.

==========

Gaming Closet Rearranged

Posted by MyLordVoid - 2004/11/27 09:29

_____

MrMorden,

I Use the Big Plastic Utility Trays for my Minis Too! And I Have Yet to Find a Suitable Solution for DF Storage... I Still Keep Everything in the Styro-foam Boxes... I am a Bit Superstitious about Taking them Out of the Packaging as I Have Moved Four Times in the Past Five Years and Really Do Not Want to Move my DF Piece by Piece... I Really Need to Figure that one out though.....

==========