WOW minis WOW, what a disappointment! Posted by L - 2008/11/16 17:23
OK now we knew these were going to be funkily scaled, and we knew they'd be pricey ($15 for three minis!!?!?)
But seriously they kinda stink. I ordered about six or seven from an online place, just to check 'em out. They are around the same quality as Reaper's prepainted line. Far, far worse than the best DDM has to offer, and a million times worse than Rackham's prepainted stuff. Some of them are decent enough, but really for this price and to justify the stupid scale-up, these needed to be STUNNING. If I'm gonna pay $15 for three excessively large minis, they need to be the best minis on the table, you know? And these, frankly, just ain't. Plus, the stands are far clunkier, thicker, and harder to ignore than just about every other plastic base out there (except, of course, the MK clicky bases)
Not the worst minis I've ever seen, but given the fanfare, the popularity of the property, and the price decidedly a meh offering.

That's a shame, L. I had planned to pick up a few after Christmas, but I might not bother. If it's as bad as you say, I'll just wait for the line to die off and pick them up cheap afterward.
Is there any way you could post some pics with DDM figs for comparison? I've been looking for size comparisons online and can't really find any.
Thanks,
Yukon

Posted by Ghenghis Ska - 2008/11/21 20:35 I took a look at the ?Starter? /core set, (what everit is called) at my FLGS the other day... err uhm... the little Gnome thingy just seems to get lost on that base... I didn't see any boosters but yeah, this will be easy to pass on... Sooooo glad i don't care about WoW. But i bought 2 demon web boosters, just to see them in person, and uhm... i'll post my thoughts on Demon web in that thread.

I've since seen the starter in my FLGS as well. Disappointing. Still, if they were in scale, I'd probably pick up a few.
