Looking for a miniature - Attic Whisperer

Posted by jericho - 2011/12/16 08:15

_____

The description: "This thing resembles a gray, emaciated child, with cobwebs and dust for clothes and a fox skull for a head."

An illustration:

http://fc09.deviantart.net/fs20/f/2007/297/e/c/Attic_Whisperer_by_nJoo.jpg

Any ideas? Thanks in advance.

Cheers,

Jericho

==========

Re:Looking for a miniature - Attic Whisperer

Posted by Harneloot - 2011/12/16 08:51

_____

None of these are really close, but might do in a pinch:

Kobold Zombie
Quickling
Dwarf Skeleton (snip off the axe?)
Quasit (painted white?)

These are all DDM figures.
Hope this helps!

==========

Re:Looking for a miniature - Attic Whisperer

Posted by David Wasilewski - 2011/12/17 06:48

_____

If you're a modeller this is what I'd do:

Buy a pack of Kobolds. Select the most appropriate one(s), snip the head(s) off and replace with a skull(s). Possibly drape the figure in a trimmed down piece of kitchen roll tissue paper that has been drenched in pva and then use a metal probe to drape the tissue around the kobold to make it look like a shawl.

Leave to dry then paint.

Or just use a goblin figure proxy and tell your players to use their imagination! :)

Dave

==========

Re:Looking for a miniature - Attic Whisperer

Posted by Pusherman - 2011/12/17 08:05

_____

The D&D miniature that i think it resembles the most is the Kobold Sorcerer.

I would attach a pic but i cant atm (ipad wont let me) so here is a link to the miniature gallery that it is in.

D&D Miniatures Aberrations Gallery

==========

Re:Looking for a miniature - Attic Whisperer

Posted by jericho - 2011/12/17 11:12

_____

David Wasilewski wrote:
If you're a modeller this is what I'd do:

Buy a pack of Kobolds. Select the most appropriate one(s), snip the head(s) off and replace with a skull(s). Possibly drape the figure in a trimmed down piece of kitchen roll tissue paper that has been drenched in pva and then use a metal probe to drape the tissue around the kobold to make it look like a shawl.

Leave to dry then paint.

Or just use a goblin figure proxy and tell your players to use their imagination! :)

Dave

Thanks for all of the great suggestions everyone! In the end I was inspired by David's idea. After reading his post in dawned on me that I had a box of the Caesar miniatures Undead 1:72 scale miniatures. Also, in my hobby box I found these miniatures plastic skulls I bought off of ebay that are slightly larger than the one on the Ceasar miniature. So I swapped them (big head little body looks more like a child) and did the tissue idea that Dave put me on to and ended up with this. I haven't applied a wash yet - not sure if I want to. I like the idea of something so creepy looking bright like it does. It stands a little past a human adult DnD mini's waist. Later after it dries I will throw up some pics of it next to another mini. I might get out the super sculpy and try to make a little teddy bear to go along with it (which will end up being an animated object ready to attack my players).

http://www.dwarvenforge.com/images/fbfiles/images/atticwhisperer.jpg[/

==========

Re:Looking for a miniature - Attic Whisperer

Posted by Fu-Man Chu - 2011/12/20 12:33

_____

Great job! You have got quite a talent for the mini modding!

==========

Re:Looking for a miniature - Attic Whisperer

Posted by David Wasilewski - 2011/12/21 03:39

_____

That looks good! Well done.

Dave

==========