_____

No big deal of a setup, compared to other's I've seen, but I felt compelled to post something and so here they are...

That is an awesome set up. I especially like the incorporation of the MBA stuff. Those wooden fences look great.

I agree - basic but very fun looking setup as well. I also like the incorporation of many different elements into it, really adds to things quite well.

WARNING: THIS MAY BE MY LONGEST POST EVER!!!!

Skip to bottom to get the TRTFW rating...

When I saw this I thought to myself "WOW, this is great setup!"
I thought this for many reasons; it incorporates several different sets with great transitions and unique positioning, it looks very similar to setups that I often put out although I tend to do about half of this size each time due to teh fact we only game in 6 hour segments every other weekend, it uses MBA pieces which I love to use with DF, and most of all I can see the progression in the game by looking at the setup.

So as a result I am torn with how to rank this. I first thought single.... Then I said to myself no it is better than a single, let me think about a double... Then I said well I am going to give it a bonus because it looks like a setup I would do... Then I said no that is not fair to the dozens of other folks who I have given kudos to them for their setups... I then thought I do not want to dilute the comments by giving out more than a double on this.... but something was tugging at me....

SO FOR THE FIRST TIME EVER I am giving out a

Double plus a quarter THIS ROCKS THE FREE WORLD!!!!
