Necromancer's Lair
Posted by radien - 2012/06/10 14:36

I used the Realm of the Ancients and the Realm of the Ancients 2 Set to make a Necromancer's lair. Most of the Dragon's treasure is from the earlier Dwarven Forge Treasure Sets. I don't have the new treasure set or I would have used it. I made a YouTube video, and the link is listed below:

Thanks for watching.

I love it! Especially the malnourished glabrezu (is that custom?) and the "midnight blade". Nice work and cool paint jobs on your minis.

Thanks, Arcarius. I purchased the glabrezu on Ebay and am not certain of the age of the miniature. But I do recall that in AD&D (1st edition) the glabrezu (or TYPE III Demon) was large sized. It may have been created around that time period.

Nice setup and video! :)

The glabrezu is a very old (released almost 10 years ago) Reaper Miniature (Demon Marbrezuk) from the time when they modeled their demons pretty much exactly after the description of the 3.0 Monster Manual. :)

Thanks for the info, Kronos. I had never seen that one before. I really like the old school look!

I really like how a few sets of ROA can really make a great enviroment. love the dragon room , its like turn the the corner and WHAM in your face . best strat would be wait till he leaves to feast then , loot what you can carry.

Thanks, Rydendragons. The ROA sets are some of my favorite sets. I can't wait until I get the new treasure set. It will work great with them.
