While browsing through one of my favorite sites I came across a host of new items that would be perfect for those of you with the Ice Cavern pieces.

Thanks for sharing these. I found them under the fantasy category for anybody having trouble navigating the site.

The crystal accessories really make me want to see a crystal cavern expansion set and a mushroom caverns expansion set from dwarven forge one of these days.

Crystals are very nice but what about this portal...?

I picked it up several years ago but now that DF has Ice Caverns it gets lots of use!

The portal changes color which is spectacular in dim light.

I'll try to make a video and post it here.

Ice Cavern Accessories "Icy Tomb"
Posted by jgardner44 - 2012/06/22 18:03

_____

Does anybody have ideas for a clear plastic ice crystal "tomb" for a figure to be trapped in? It should allow the figure inside to be seen, but have a suitable "frosty" blue ice crystal look to it.

This would make for a nice accessory for a frozen wizard. Or a magical spell freezing an adventurer...or a frozen caveman. A larger version could have a frozen dinosaur or any number of other frozen critter ideas for a fun ice cavern adventure. If designed properly it could double as a thick frozen pillar or a thick doorway for a modular design. Plus the hollow nature would require less resin when casting it for a price perspective.

It's funny everytime, I think about a frozen cavern accessory expansion set I imagine building a superman fortress of solitude ice/crystal set up with angular crystal doorways and column structures in the set. Perhaps dwarven forge will take a look at the superman movies for ideas and then put their own unique spin on it :). For fantasy a blue color to the crystals might give it a different look other than superman white.

For a figure trapped in ice, I really think casting something fairly generic (like a humanoid figure painted shades of white, grey, and blue) in clear resin is the way to go.

A clear or frosted container to put minis in is problematic, as lots of minis have projections (swords, staffs, outstretched arms, capes, whatever) that won't fit in the (same) container.

Thanks for sharing these figures and the site.
I will now keep my (ebay) eye out for Painted Acheson models.
Cheers.
