This year, we're taking a slight departure from the norm and doing something a little different. All weekend we're going to run "Enduro Dungeon". We'll have two large, linear maps set up with DF. You enter with your party and see how far you get before you are are killed. The group that makes it the farthest by the end of the Con gets prizes, and there may well be additional spot prizes along the way.

Sounds awesome!

Love the name! Is it going to have puzzles and traps as well, or just straight up pummel them to a pulp conbat?
KublaCon 2010 Posted by pfworks - 2010/02/11 16:26
There will, of course, be traps. Could be puzzles I won't know until the mood strikes me and I start making encounters. Speaking of traps, I have well over 50 unique traps that I've compiled from all the past adventures. I'm thinking of converting all of them to 4e and making a PDF for distro, time permitting I've gone thru and extracted them all already.

Could you list them pre-conversion as well? Please? :D

I couldn't find it under the RPG listings -- is it called "Enduro Dungeon?" I'm thinking this might be the a good year to try KublaCon for the first time and it would be great to see join in on some D&D+DF goodness. KublaCon 2010 Posted by Kradlo - 2010/02/12 01:32 I love the idea! It brings back the tales of Dave Hargrave's tournament elimination dungeons. "The doors open, and the first six balrogs enter the room..." :D ______ KublaCon 2010 Posted by pfworks - 2010/02/12 02:03 I haven't submitted it yet, but we are good friends with the RPG coordinator, so it will be up soon, not to worry!
