Hi guyz,

I just backed a kickstarter project called dungeons and dragons: a documentary and what did i find on their homepage? Our one and only Stefan discussing passionately about our favorite hobby.

I thought to share it here.

Brief Stefan cameo

ANd while you're at it, check that kickstarter project, it's really cool

Good find. On that topic, think about how you started playing D&D. I have plans to run a little adventure for my niece (10) and nephew (12) with LOTS of DF terrain. I'm pretty sure they love it.

My cousin and I started playing it when we were about 10. I remember buying a monster manual at a bookstore (an coincidentally getting confronted by a religious fanatic about how playing the game as a path to hell which scared the crap out of my grandma). Eventually I bought the other two books and we would make characters and play through adventures with me as the DM and a player completely cheating so that we always came out as awesome. We loved making the characters and giving them back stories and we would go play in the woods behind his house and pretend to be our characters on an adventure with costumes and all. I still remember our favorite characters. His was a rogue called Gullwing (I guess he love DeLoreans lol) and mine was a dwarf fighter named Grimble. Sadly he grew up and stopped gaming.

Heard about this on the Tome Show and the Obsidian Portal podcast- Pledged $75 for the double-disk set when this is eventually completed.

4 days left to go at this point and around $25,000 left to be collected for the Kickstarter campaign to be a success.

Good news- they have reached their funding goal! There's still a few days left for them to get more funding and maybe reach a "stretch goal" or two.

Bad news- not expecting to get my copy on disk (my chosen backer award) until around May 2014. Hopefully we'll get more teasers and interview clips int he meantime.

I really love seeing more of the behind the scenes video at DF with Stefan telling us about how passionate he is about the hobby. I know I'd be a dvd/blu-ray from DF itself showing us Stefan and the team of great artists working on making sets, involved in rpg gaming situations, setting up and showing their wares at conventions ect.

Please consider documenting lots of videos of what you guys are doing. I know I'd be a buyer for one since I love your company so much! :) I loved seeing the colloseum being built for example!
