Many thanks to the fans who sold me some of their Sci fi sets.
I got some in my hands today and I cannot understand how I could miss this before !

I still need more alpha & beta sets to make biggest rooms & levels.
It's possible to me to buy a lot.

Just make me an offer.

Absolutely not.

I took this week the last starter & passage set for 100$ postage & package included to France (no VAT on it since it's used ^^).

I also bought some used stocks from unexpected european miniature sellers who have contacted me (i put adds in several forums).

I have the furniture set since 2 years.

So in total, now I own this SF furniture set + 3 passage sets & 5 starter sets.
Still impossible to get the alpha & beta sets ... and I don't expect a restock in the contener with the catacomb set.

DF Europe has no SCI FI sets to sell and DF USA doesn't sell the alpha set.
Still no news about the beta set which is more than essential to make bigger rooms.

I am pretty sure there has been mention on these boards by Jeff and/or Stefan that the Gamma set did not sell well and that most of the Sci-fi stuff did not sell nearly as well as the traditional dungeon type stuff. They are a small company and they need to put their money where they see the most rapid return, so they can continue to re-stock and create new excellent stuff! You know this as well as any of us HQF...I am sorry you can't find the sets you need but keep looking on e-bay, they will eventually turn up (yes, yes, expensive shipping, expensive VAT!) You are an avid fan and great champion of DF, but please don't insinuate that the lack of sci-fi restocks is somehow the fault of DF. (and you certainly know for sure there is no sci-fi in the coming containter since Jeff posted the contents)....maybe you should have started buying sci-fi sets sooner is all?

I did not say something like that or didn't intend to say something that made you think that.
Jeff purposed me years ago a deal on sci-fi sets however the beta set was already out of stock and it's something rare to find on ebay.
That's why I didn't take the deal since I wanted something complete.
(at least one set of each is the minimum for a collection)

I agree with you : I wake up too late ! I remember those sets weren't so expensive in 2006 and all was available. But I've started my collection with heroic fantasy, the main games I use.

Today with zombicide, a doom variant, gears of wars, space crusade, space hulk, resident evil boardgame (made by a spanish) and some other sci fi games I realized I needed the sci fi line.

I also have a nice job now, with a good paid and have no more worry about the price of what I want to buy.

Now I only look for the beta set and I must admit that the fall of the dollar those last days pushed me to make the step !

In few weeks, I got some starter rooms & passage sets and could find one alpha set which is very great to add variety.

So I'm saving money to buy a "sci fi lot" because I don't think someone will want to sell one beta set to me. But my offer is still on.

I sold my only two beta sets to Sorn some time ago otherwise I would sell you one. Keeping looking man, they will come up eventually.
If I happen to find another one I will let you know.

Btw how do you like zombicide? I just ordered mine after playing it at a friends house two weeks ago. Too bad I missed the kickstarter version of it with the extra characters but I believe they are releasing an expansion at some point.

Yep !

The first expansion and addtional heroes will be sold very soon. Edge (the french distributor) announced the expansions for the first months of the year so ...

I really like it, the game has a nice system without a gamemaster and it's a lot of fun. Better than the d&d boardgames released recently.

About the beta set, I keep my eyes opened.
I don't know if Sorn will sell me one ... may be maybe be ... I cross the fingers lol

I like the sci-fi sets, but to be honest Im saving my cash to buy new hellscape sets and ice cavern sets. Im hoping for several more set types from both of those lines more than anything else
