Treasures and Magic Item Set on eBay Posted by Arcarius2001 - 2011/08/30 23:15
OK, my stop limit was $140 all in with shipping. It went for $158.02 (I love the two cents worth!) plus $6.95 shipping. I hope that I lost to a fellow forum member

For something sold 40 buck I don't understand indeed. I had the luck a DF fan sold me one treasure set "new" for 40€ including postage & package. So if there's a public demand what is waiting for DF to release it again then? It's not something "collector" isn't it? And the basic dunjeon line including accessories must be always available. Time to vote!

I sold one of mine for 120.00 free shipping awhile back. The most expensive one I saw was maybe around christmas a year or two ago that went for 250.00+

At least the treasure set you got will still be a collector's item since the new set seems like it will be very different (egyptian/mesopotamian theme, plus standard gold piles and stuff too).

Definitely wait for the cavern sets to come in. They are AMAZING, but to pay that kind of money is ridiculous, especially when you consider they are still an item DF stocks. These things seem to go in cycles- sets will be out of stock for what feels like an eternity when you really want one, but patience pays off and they eventually come back in. DF is such a niche company that they can't keep all items in stock all the time. The best way we can keep them going strong is by being patient and going to ebay mostly for items that are out of print (ogre's den, traps, treasure set, for example), rather than items that are temporarily out of stock.

Congrats on the win, Random! And I echo granpappy's sentiment. Ebay is good for out of "print" stuff, better to buy everything else through Dwarven Forge. If you are really wanting some cavern stuff, check out the 4 small caves, the edge piece from the lake set, and the cavern intersection with chasm. All of these are available as separate pieces and with a bit of imagination, are still useful without the full cavern set. Also, that intersection and caves are from the cavernous passages set. Not sure if that will be restocked anytime soon.

Oh and of course, there is their excellent customer service. Those few occasions when I see someone post about a problem with a new piece, Jeff or Stefan are on it right away. Sending replacement pieces is something a seller on ebay just can't do.

you guys don't need to sell me on buying from dwarvenforge.com first:) I did poor research when I was bidding on the cavern on ebay and was thinking there was a good chance they would never get back in stock (or at least not for 6 months). DF just made a decent chunk of cash on me in the last week and I definitely want them to continue to do what they do so well! Also, I have already purchased several of each of the items that Arcarius mentioned and they will be here with the rest of my order tomorrow, although I'm sure they will just make me want a complete cavern set even more.

Don't worry, that is a completely new Treasure set. I think the old one really is gone gone gone :-(

Good to know that these auctions aren't just shill bidders. I kept an eye on that auction but that was too much for too little and some pieces were broken (?) There are plenty of good alternatives for misc dungeon treasure with Reaper and some other places.
