In my opinion, this is the best of them all!!!... by far!

Le Donjon de Naheulbeuk: http://www.penofchaos.com/warham/donjon.htm

It's a saga of very funny and cliche silly D&D characters (grumpy barbarian, greedy dwarf, beautiful idiot and naive female elf, stupid always-hungry ogre, knows-it-all mage, gay bard...) having many adventures in over 30 free MP3 audio files. The only problem for large audiences is that it's in french... http://www.dwarvenforge.com/images/fbfiles/images/boite_peints28mm_figurines.jpg The creator of this saga (and a few of his friends) also makes music shows about RPG and I saw him twice in shows in Montreal, very entertaining! Well, I'm actually old enough that I heard them twenty-odd years ago when they were going around for the second or third time. Re:Gamer Humor Posted by jackattack - 2011/09/21 01:41 Oh, Harvard Lampoon's Bored of the Rings. I found a copy when I was a teenager. Couldn't get through a single page without cracking up. My parents thought I was brain damaged. ______ Re:Gamer Humor Posted by biowizard - 2011/09/22 00:33

...There has been only 1 post or so upon the DF forum over the last 48 hours. Are the usual readers busy reading (and laughing) game-related comics?

Those are pretty funny too. Gold, the series, also has its moments. Re:Gamer Humor Posted by Arcarius2001 - 2011/09/22 05:55 I assume most of us have watched The Gamers, Dorkness Rising? Also, the DnD movies are so bad that they could maybe qualify as spoofs. Re:Gamer Humor Posted by jackattack - 2011/09/23 01:35 And for your iPods: "DM Hold Music" "D&D" by Stephen Lynch "It's a Fanboy Christmas" by the Great Luke Ski

I recently stumbled over very funny D&D cartoons: The Order of the Stick! http://www.giantitp.com/comics/oots.html

There's over 800 pages of neatly drawn D&D characters and many of the first 300 pages I've read last Saturday (I just could not stop reading them until late at night) made me laugh to tears! Read a few, they're that good.
