I could have just as easily put these in the thread I'd already started, but for the purposes of easy searching later, I wanted to flag the presence of the really cool McFarlane Toys dragons in the title. Once upon a time, these were great cheap alternatives to super-expensive gaming dragons. They retailed for around $12, while comparably sized dragons made by gaming companies tended to go for at least $30. Of course, the McFarlane line is long out of print now, and it's tough to get some of these for less than $20-30 anyway. Still cheaper than many dragons by WOTC or Reaper, and more durable, and pre-painted, and so on. But they are AWESOME accessories for DF. http://www.dwarvenforge.com/images/fbfiles/images/209.jpg

Wow that looks great. I bought a couple of Mage Knight Dragons and rebased them but I think those looks better (and I think they are bigger).
