I've been really excited about seeing how the DF prison works in non-dungeon settings, so I re-purposed my MBS structure into a kind of jail. It's a small village detention center.

Some people have noted that the prison pieces don't always line up perfectly, and since mine is on a second floor, balanced on somewhat uneven narrow passage pieces, it is even more exaggerated. Still, I think this looks pretty awesome. ;)

Actually, I kind of like the uneven look of the cage. Gives more realism. The result of countless futile efforts from past prisoners trying to "bend bars / lift gates".

That looks great! Where did you get the wooden staircase?

Thanks, guys! The staircase I made with Hirst Arts molds - a basic wood plank and a special "tooth" frame for just this purpose. I made a bunch awhile back, before MBS even came out, but most have broken or been discarded over time. I kept this one, though, because it's a great alternate staircase for this type of setting.

Re:Wicked Additions prison in MBS layout Posted by Kronos - 2012/01/15 08:17 Great display of the prison. I love it. I was actually not really connived I really "needed" the WA III. Thanks for correcting that. :) Re:Wicked Additions prison in MBS layout Posted by Shadox - 2012/01/20 21:58
