

Old out of print sets for sale.

Posted by Tcopher - 2013/03/27 21:39

Hello all,

Please pm me if anyone is looking to pick up some older out print sets and I would put them up on eBay.

Like Advance builder, wicked editions, Lake, etc...

Given all the current talk onsite about the KS and possibly making OOS sets available for pre-order, I call bad faith on the above post @Tcopher: Maybe you should trade for KS sets?

Just a thought.

Selling your DF sets isn't bad faith.

Selling your DF sets before they are restocked (or before the bottom potentially drops out of the DF resale market) is actually shrewd.

Selling your DF sets at premium prices just before they are restocked would be opportunistic (bad faith), but I don't know what the seller is asking for his sets. The fact that he is advertising here on the forums suggests that he is not trying to take advantage of uninformed customers.

I will credit the OOP/OOS difference to simple error. "Out of print" means that an item is discontinued, like the first DoE Set and Traps I & II. "Out of stock" means that an item is temporarily sold out, but will be available again when DF orders more. The sets mentioned by the seller are out of stock, not out of print. I hope that any eBay listings will be accurate on this point.

Out of curiosity, bowties or no bowties?

Also there is no PM on this site so no way to contact the seller anyway unless he posts an email address. So the post is moot at this point.

Although it does not violate the forum general rules, it is generally, considered rude to advertize products here that are still in production.

Post on eBay and they will sell by the way... but don't claim they are out-of-print; that's misleading (+ possibly mischievous).

How many times have regulars and semi-regulars announced that they are selling their DF stuff, most of which was still in production, right here on this forum? Followed by other regulars and semi-regulars expressing interest, right here on this forum.

And how many times have forum-goers posted about eBay auctions or retailers or websites that have DF for sale? Followed by other forum-goers thanking the poster because they won or bought those sets.

These forums have traditionally been very tolerant about honest sellers posting availability of second hand DF. And if "OOP" was just a mistake, this seller hasn't done anything to deserve the cool reception he's been getting.

Save it for the $300 minimum bids and the pirated products. A few pre-owned sets won't upset the cart.

Sorry if I mislead anyone I meant out of stock and some out of print (bow ties , Ogre den)
All I was wanting to do was offer people here on the forum a first chance at some older set that I'm not using at a fair price on eBay. I'm not selling anything that Dwarven Forge has in stock and not trying to scalp anyone.
I know everyone is excited about the new game tiles, me too, I'm a backer, but I'm really wanting to paint them up myself. So I'm getting the new unpainted game tiles and was planning on letting some older ones go, thats all.
Sorry again.

I may have that beat when you factor in other pieces.

Tcopher, Sorry I was so fast chastising you. I saw DF got abused so many times, before. For example, someone once bought out huge quantities of the DOE Room & Passage Set, making this Set Out of Print and making it unavailable for real fans, unless they would pay 75% more on eBay.

You can embed an eBay auction within a Post on this forum. It's easy (top-right button of the window when you click reply) and convenient for exposure!
