Tom - updated pics of my game room for your site Posted by erc1971 - 2013/06/23 23:17
I have done some updates to my gaming room, so I figured you would like to post the new images :P
To start, I now have 21 dwarven forge sets, not 5 :P
In this first picture you will notice several changes. The most useful is the new table top - a 5' x 6' grid covered by plexiglass - we can use markers on it, spill drinks on it, etc and it keeps coming back for more. In addition I have replaced my old falling apart bookshelves. Things are much better organized now, and you see some of my modern/futuristic card stock models I have been assembling in preparation of my Cyberpunk game I will be launching in a couple months (this is the reason I have not been on the boards much lately :P)

In this second picture you can see shelving units I mounted to my walls to store terrain, buildings, maps, and mini's. This has replaced alot of my art, as storing my goodies is more important than decoration.

My closet is pretty similar to how it was before - lots of mini's and hooks to display maps as needed. Though, you will all the white storage boxes that contain my much expanded DF collection :D

And lastly, you probably noticed the blacklight hanging from my ceiling. This is used for Cyberpunk! The tabletop, markers, dice, books, character sheets, drinking glasses, and cardstock terrain all glow under the blacklight, thus creating a sweet atmosphere for the dark future!

Glad everyone enjoyed the pictures. I have had the gaming room for around 15 years now, and have been continually improving it. (It started out as 2 bookshelves and a card table!)
And I must say the blacklight idea came from Wisdom (he is on the rpg.net forums as well as the cyberpunk forums Views From The Edge, and his Datafortress 2020 website).
