Hello,
As mentioned previously in this forum, I have been working on a alternative D&D rules set for approximately 2 years and am about to finally launch a new version (for free), as a pdf download. I would very much like to include images (taken by myself) of "in game" shots using Dwarven Forge terrain. Dwarven Forge is credited as creating the terrain and is highly recommended by myself within the rules, including a link to the Dwarven Forge website.
While I understand the terrain designs are DF's intellectual property, I see this as an opportunity for Dwarven Forge to be viewed by (hopefully) new people. (ie: Free Advertising).
What is Dwarven Forge's corporate stance on something like this?

Your response would be greatly appreciated.

Thanks,
Steve Lefort

That's fine:)

Good for both of us.
