Much happiness. So breaking everything out i wanted to see what i could set up for an RPG base Complex etc. How much was required to get a good Setup going... So i wanted to make a little impeiral outpost, where they are doing there... something, i'll figure that out later... profanity!

That is quite a set-up! Huge! Very cool. I wanna see more close-ups of other sections. I love the idea of using the holographic Sidious -- I thought of doing that myself, but I couldn't find mine. Ah well, one day I will.

Great setup.

Yeah that is the Falcon in the back, and yup it is Action figure Scale, which is oddyy "about" the mini scale a little large, sine the falcon is about 27 m long, or 81 feet, in true scal of 1 inch = 5 ft it comes out to 16 incss the for how big the ship should be for Mini scale the ship is about 20, so a bit big, but one of the closest and easist to get your hands on, and since i have numerous gutted 70's era ships i plan on one day making an interior to scale. I was going to cut it out of the picture but it kind of fit so i left it...

I'll post close ups later

Cool shots! Is that the passage set in the last picture there? The wall deco looks different.

I probably WILL end up getting the passage set eventually, it does have some neat stuff on it. I just can't get behind paying about $10 a piece, it's just so expensive. And for the same money, I can get another starter or a different set, which will give me a lot more variety and so forth.

Yeah, it is looking down the long section of the T, the Top as it where, the camera was pretty much over the Hero's the "red" bar is actually the Orange lightsaber of the Custom Gand Jedi Consular made from a Mace Windu Epic Duels Figure.
One of the things i noticed recently is even the other half of the same passage section is different. The pieces one side of the corner is done differently than the other. Some thing i had not noticed till i looked really close
