Generated: 12 March, 2014, 01:49 DF as Photo Props Posted by Guest - 2004/04/07 11:33 Does anyone here use DF primarily (or additionally) as props for mini photography? I know people who use those mould-your-own building blocks for it. Too messy and time consuming for me to bother with, that's one of the reasons I find DF so intriguing. Kenneth DF as Photo Props Posted by Mister Sharkey - 2004/04/26 19:10 Sure. I often use Master Maze pieces as backdrops for photographing my painted miniatures. The only drawback is that it's almost impossible to keep the seams between the pieces from showing in the photos. With that one minor annoyance, they're wonderful as backdrops. DF as Photo Props Posted by Dante - 2004/04/27 20:44 An easy way to get rid of the "seams" in the photos is to edit them in Adobe Photoshop or any other image editing software. I do this a lot when I'm using pics to sell stuff on ebay--I edit out the seams on my warboards and DF pieces. It really makes all the difference in the world on the final pics. -Dante DF as Photo Props Posted by Buggeye - 2004/04/28 08:28 Yep, just take a look at the pics in the link in my Signature. DF as Photo Props Posted by DaggerdaleDM - 2004/05/06 10:38

Dwarven Forge - Dwarven Forge

Dwarven Forge - Dwarven Forge

Dwarven Forge - Dwarven Forge Generated: 12 March, 2014, 01:49

DF as Photo Props Posted by Thor - 2004/05/10 08:39
So the "Big Biker Babes" magizine is in the mail? :lol:
DF as Photo Props Posted by DaggerdaleDM - 2004/05/10 19:30
Thanks thor! I just squirted water out of my nose!:)
That laugh caught me so off guard. Much needed after a long day. Oh no, I just gave you another opportunity didn't I? ;)
DF as Photo Props Posted by Thor - 2004/05/11 08:57
My kind only gets Ex.Pts. from causeing others to expell liquids from themselves. Remember the guy that made people's milk come out of thier noses in high school? That's me. :D
Not quite sure what the social benifits to society as a whole, but we sure do have a gross family crest. ;;
DF as Photo Props Posted by SovS - 2004/05/11 09:47
DF as photo props is cool actually for the start of my next session I'm going to make a photo album of the session. Kinda like the following pic, but it would chronicle the party's journey through the dungeon. In this case the party is searching the room
======================================